I am currently a joint Ph.D. candidate in Anthropology & Linguistics at the University of Arizona. My dissertation defense is scheduled for mid-June 2020 and I will have filed my completed dissertation by August 1, 2020. My primary research focuses broadly on the relationship between economic development and language use in the Arab world. I have also conducted collaborative research on language use in Arizona, as well as the discourse of coffee marketing and branding. As an award-winning instructor, I have over four years of teaching experience at the University of Arizona, primarily within the field of anthropology.
